

5 THINGS WE LOVE ABOUT DC REBIRTH

Like The new status quo of the DC universe

BY VASPAAN DASTOOR → If you've been living under a rock, you probably don't know that DC Rebirth is the new status quo of the DC universe. Rebirth is DC's way of tying up some of the loose ends from The New 52 era, as well as bringing back the favourite things about our superheroes (and villains). This is also an attempt to get new readers on-board. A new status quo means new #1 issues, and that means anyone meaning to read the comics now has a place to start.

I've personally been loving all of DC Rebirth, so I decided to feature some of my favourite things about it. WARNING: MAJOR SPOILERS AHEAD

Right in the feels

There's nothing more amazing than seeing your favourite superhero busting some skulls. But you know it's special when a comic book makes you truly feel for the characters. It's evident that the Rebirth writers have kept the readers' emotions in mind while scripting. One of the best examples of this is The Final Days of Superman. We watch as Earth's mightiest hero finds his body slowly failing him. He's dying because of his recent battles against Darkseid and Rao. We see Superman doing the things he loves; meeting his mother, playing with his dog and tying up other loose ends. The last few panels are the most heart wrenching; a dying Superman surrounded by Wonder Woman, Batman and Lana Lang, where he bids his final goodbye. Ofcourse, there is another Superman who takes over, but that is for another time.

Another example comes in the form of an iconic scene from Flash Rebirth The Button. Barry and Bruce travel through time to unravel the mystery of the Button, when they land up in the Batcave from the Flashpoint universe. And yes, it happens; Bruce meets his father, Thomas Wayne, the Flashpoint Batman. If you thought the letter scene from Flashpoint was emotional, this will bring you to tears.
